Solution

Although stock markets aren't new, they could be unfamiliar and risky for most of the people which not are accustomed to operate in. For that it is required a lot of learning and guided practices in order to handle the risk and take advantage of its opportunities. Something similar could happen with this new thing called crowdworking.

Please provide us with some background information on your visualization.

It seeks to create an analogy between crowdworking and stock markets. If we compare the way both work, maybe it could have some similarities: Both involves the management of risks and opportunities, exchange shares (or ideas) whose value or ranking varies over a set time. Also, crowdworking can be considered as a market where clients, platform and creatives interact.
